Congratulations to National Bank Financial on becoming the latest dealer with a discount brokerage arm to offer on line trading in CNSX listed securities. This is a boon to retail investors who are active in the markets and want to save time and money. Those who do not have on line access are able to trade CNSX stocks by calling in their orders. They can then apply pressure on the dealer to give them the on line preferred rate on their commission fees payable to the dealer. This has proven to be a successful strategy by many clients of many dealers. Real time market data is priced much lower for professional users such as dealers to ensure that dealers have reasonable access to up to the second quotes. Coupled with the fact that CNSX introduced lower trading fees with a maximum per trade there is an argument that can be made that trading on CNSX should be as economical as on any other stock exchange platform.

In February CNSX continued its recent trend of active trading and welcomed three new companies. One of these, Hilltown Resources ("HLT"), completed a small IPO, demonstrating once again the economies of listing on CNSX. The other two went public by way of reverse takeover. Real estate developer Stoneset Equities ("SQC") listed following completion of an RTO with previously unlisted Aqueous Capital and listed under the latter name. We expect that name to change in the relatively near future as Stoneset executes its public company strategy. The third company to arrive was EasyMed Services ("EZM") upon completion of an acquisition by CNSX listed InCana Investments Inc.

Global warming can benefit some of the people some of the time. The annual convention of the Prospectors and Developers Association of Canada is held in early March in Toronto and is the largest mining convention in the world. Since it outgrew the Royal York Hotel several years ago and moved to the convention center down the street, the attendees have been taking the short route outdoors and braving routinely inclement weather. This year is different and may contribute to record attendance once again.

Pure Trading

Notwithstanding the positive performance of the Canadian market indices in January, the month of February saw a decline on overall market activity. Whether it was the initiation of enforcement of the ban on “locked markets” by IIROC, the Chinese New Year holiday, the continued low risk tolerance of the institutional and retail investors, a lack of market volatility, or some combination of all of the above, trading volumes were significantly lower across the market.

Pure Trading’s market share for senior Canadian equities fell to 1.43% on the month, while share of the junior market increased to 1.02%. In total, Pure Trading executed just under 200 million shares on the month: 1190 of the companies were TSX-listed, and 221 were listed on the Venture Exchange. The top 20 traded names on Pure were:

March will see the new participation of a number of highly sophisticated liquidity provider firms in the Canadian market. Our operations and technology groups have been working with many of these new players to ensure that Pure Trading is their preferred venue for projecting liquidity into Canada. We look forward to seeing positive results from these new participants into March and especially April.
